

Alyssa Cocchiola

Digital Media Developer

Alyssa is currently pursuing a major in Digital Marketing and Analytics and a minor in Visual Communications Design at Walsh University, class of 2027. At Walsh, she sings with the university chorale and is a member of the university's esteemed Honors Program. Alyssa also sings with SCS. She is a Soprano I in the Metropolitan Chorus and attends to her peers as the choir's choral scholar.

Alyssa is a CCP alumna and began singing with SCS in 2014. She has had the honor of serving as Performance Choir President and Soprano I section leader. Throughout her time in the CCP, she has had the opportunity of singing at both local and out-of-state venues such as the EJ Thomas Hall, the Akron Civic, and Goodyear Theater, The Kennedy Center, Carnegie Hall, and the Grand Ole Opry. She has additionally had the pleasure of working under the direction of Dr. Craig Jessop, Lynn Gackle, Cheryl Dupont, and Bob Chilcott.

Prior to Walsh, Alyssa graduated from Bio-Med Science Academy with a 4.0 GPA, holding titles of National Honor Society president and editor-in-chief and publisher for Bio-Med's newspaper, The Hive. In addition to editing and publishing, Alyssa designed The Hive's website, established and organized fundraisers, represented the paper at school events, and established marketing efforts that increased the site's viewership by 10,000 views. She has also written articles for both the Walsh University's Honorable Mention Newsletter and for its school paper, The Spectator.

Alyssa was named finalist and runner up for the prestigious Georgia Stilwell Dunn Ohio Journalist of the Year award by the Ohio Scholastic Media Association in 2023.
